Metro today officially launched Hobart from a Bus – an exhibition of photographs taken by Metro Bus Operators at the Stable Gallery, Cooleys Hotel.

The free exhibition, curated by Sean Kelly, Arts Officer for Moonah Arts Centre, will be on show for the month of February.

Speaking about the exhibition launch Metro CEO, Mr Stuart Wiggins said “Our bus operators are a talented group and they see some amazing sights during their day while transporting our community.

“We believe capturing Hobart through still images while going about your daily routine is a unique and authentic way to showcase our city,” Mr Wiggins said.

Metro is in a privileged position to play a key part in encouraging healthy and happy communities through providing essential, convenient services.

“We are regularly amazed by the rich essence of our community and the way it becomes apparent in both buildings, businesses and other areas of public use,” Mr Wiggins said

“Hobart has a lot to be proud of and this grass roots photographic exhibition captures the everyday uniqueness of the city,” Mr Wiggins said.
